LIVINGSTON COLLEGE
Office of the Dean
New Brunswick, New Jersey 08903

Dear Mr. Economopoulos:

It is a pleasure for us to be writing to you now that you have received word of your admission to Livingston College. This has been an exciting year of planning and we look forward to your arrival in September.

We are including with this letter a copy of the Livingston catalog, information concerning housing and board arrangements, applications for room and board, and a list of dates to be reserved for the future. The catalog should give you some idea of the courses we will offer and introduce you to Livingston's distinguished faculty. The residential programs planned for Livingston will also offer a great deal to the entering student. We have attempted to keep the needs and strengths of students in mind in designing the residence units and in establishing policy for the coming year. Many more of the details concerning our residential programs and advisory system are given in the enclosed materials.

A special characteristic of Livingston is its respect for the contributions students can make to the college and its concern for the individual. While many plans have been made, you and your fellow students will be involved in re-thinking these plans and in developing future policies. And, while policies have been established for all students, we expect to be able to consider situations in the light of the needs of individual students.

Please feel free to call upon us should any questions arise as you read through the enclosed materials. We hope that you will be joining us at Livingston and that we may look forward to meeting you in the near future.

Sincerely,

Ernest A. Lynton
Dean
